THE SEVENTH DAY.

"Six days shalt thou labor." We have heard that good old scriptural injunction ever since we can remember. It has been drilled into our ears along with its corollary, "but the seventh day is the Lord's day." College men, too often, are prone to forget this precept of their youth, and an occasional gentle reminder may not be wasted.

There is no getting away from the first part of that injunction. Six days we must labor, like it or not. Our daily bread or our class grades depend upon it. It is the second part of the precept that we neglect. We do not divide our week with the Lord. We take his seventh, along with our six sevenths.

Not all college men are religious. To those who are not, we might suggest that the very essence of one's physical and mental being demands regular periods of rest. One day in seven certainly must be the minimum for best results. We will do better work for having given brain cells and body cells a chance to replenish and renew.

There is no need for a seven-day work week. The world was created in six days; certainly man can transact his week's business in that time. Most people out of college take one day of rest when possible. College men will find that one quiet day each week, spent in good reading and reflection, will pave the way for a fuller carrying out of the duties of the next six days.

THE MORAL OF THE WAR.

The Turko-Italian war is almost over. It was, in reality, over before it began. Italy collected its miniature navy and steamed up to Tripoli. Turkey did not even have a navy of that size. No lives were lost and none were fatally injured. The two powers had nothing to fight with.

What an argument this is for universal disarmament! What a moral this points to! This proves without words what reformers have been agitating for years. A man without hands does not seek a fist fight. A man without legs does not court a foot race. A nation without arms will not look for war. Their difficulties will be settled in a more peaceful fashion. They will have to be.

Three thousand years ago Isaiah prophesied universal peace. He predicted that the Lord shall judge among nations. Armies and navies have been the barriers to it. In the march of civilization they are unnecessary burdens. They are like a clenched fist. It makes a perhaps peaceful man appear hostile.

RELIGION AND RAG TIME.

There has been much discussion of recent years apropos the alleged decline of "church music". We speak out boldly on this subject for the churches themselves have been arguing it and one may speak his mind without being accused of sacrilege or of "knocking".

The professor of music holds up his hands in horror at the mention of rag time. To play or sing anything but classical music at a formal concert is considered bad taste. The highest standards of music bar that limitless class known as "popular." Certainly the church should have no lower standards of music than meet the requirements of dignity and of depth which centuries of religious organization have set.

There is no end to the list of song books and "collections" that may be found in our American churches. Most of the songs are of comparatively recent composition.

The mass of them do not fill the place of the impressive old hymns and anthems that our fathers sang. The fact is, we are speaking confidently now, a great real of our modern church music compares with the "popular" brand in secular music. It is a sort of religious rag-time. It is all right in intention, but in depth of sentiment and grandeur of air it falls short. You might as well expect a soldier to campaign on water and soda crackers as to depend upon such music to animate the faithful or rescue the sinner. You might as well borrow a record from a seven-day graphophone at a picture theatre.

We cannot expect every song to meet the standards of "Rock of Ages" or "Nearer My God to Thee," but we have enough church music that is genuine without trying out the latest religious "hits." We like to go away from church feeling as if we had done a good day's work and that there is something dependable in this world besides the proverbial death and taxes. It takes a good, old fashioned, rousing hymn to give us that confidence and feeling of general satisfaction that attendance on religious worship should give.

SLAUGHTER HOUSE UP AGAIN

Most of Board of Health Favor Hetzler Brothers' Proposal.

The majority of the members of the Columbia Board of Health reported to the slaughter house committee Thursday afternoon that a slaughter house, if run under the sanitary conditions that the Hetzler Brothers propose for theirs, would be no menace to the health of the community.

A committee was appointed last Tuesday at the council meeting, to look into the advisability of allowing a slaughter-house in Columbia. This committee took no definite action, but it will report the opinion of the majority of the Board of Health at the next council meeting, when definite action will be taken.

Whether or not the slaughter pen will be a disadvantage to property owners, will be left in the hands of the council.

NEGRO WOMAN GETS $100

Property Damaged by Wabash, Circuit Court Jury Decided.

The Wabash railroad must pay $100 to Emmaline Williams, a negro washwoman, according to a verdict in the circuit court yesterday morning. The Week in Columbia Society

The engagement of Miss Y. Besse Smith and L. Francis Burruss was announced Friday afternoon at a party given by Miss Mildred Norris at 305 College avenue. They will be married November 25, the day of the Missouri-Kansas football game.

The announcement came as a surprise to most of the twenty-four friends who attended the party. The house was decorated entirely in red and green. The shades were drawn and the rooms lighted with candles. Autumn leaves, scarlet sage, ferns and trailing green vines with the red hearts and bells, made a charming effect.

When the guests had assembled, cards were passed around with keys of all sizes fastened to them. On the cards was written: "The Key to the Situation." The guests were shown into another room where a tiny red bungalow stood on a table amid green moss and miniature forest trees. Over the table hung a large, red bell and strings of hearts extended from the chandelier to the corners of the table. Miss Norris announced that one of the party was soon to begin house-keeping, and that person had the key that would open the door of the bungalow. Miss Smith's key was the only one that would fit the lock.

After this, the guests were given heart-shaped sheets of paper and were asked to write hints on good housekeeping. These were tied together and given to Miss Smith for future use.

A light luncheon was served and Miss Smith gave away the favors which were imitation diamond rings tied to lady fingers with bright red ribbons.

Miss Smith is the daughter of Mrs. C. Emma Smith of 303 College avenue. She is a former student of the University and it was while attending school that she met Frank Burruss, one of Missouri's former star football and basketball players. Mr. Burruss was graduated from the School of Engineering in 1911. He has a position with the Steel Construction company at Gary, Ind.

Announcements have been received here of the marriage of Miss Helen Alberta Sewall, graduate of the University of Missouri in 1904, to Frederick Huston Hunter at Gorham, Maine, August 22. Mr. and Mrs. Bedford are to live in the fraternity house as chaperons for the Alpha Tau Omegas.

Miss Katherine Helm, a Kappa Kappa Gamma member, has gone to her home in Hannibal, Mo., for the week end.
